Grundtvig - Partnership Project

PRESENTATION OF THE PROJECT

Due to the current economical crisis, evolution of the labour market and to the evolving society, some people – especially long time unemployed – cannot adjust to the changes nor have difficulties to get reinstated in a fully satisfying professional position. After years of full work experiences and acquired professionalism, a period of unemployment is a standstill in a person's career that sometimes can undermine personal motivation and self confidence.

The project aims at supporting unemployed persons to look for a new mission in life, based not only on studies, education and professional skills acquired during the working experiences, but also using interests, ideas and visions in order to (re) motivate them and start a new career path or simply to empower them.

The survey will be used by the partners to update the skills and preparation of trainers, coaches and career counsellors to support persons to find their mission in life and to use the mission for reintegration to business world – either employed or as an entrepreneur.

PROJECT OBJECTIVES

The concrete objectives of the partnership are:

- Facilitate unemployed people to find their mission in life based on interests, ideas and visions to motivate the person for this new integration to the market, to the business world.
- Facilitate trainers, coaches and career counsellors by creating a manual with guidelines how to support the unemployed to find their mission in life and furthermore reintegrate to the business world.

- Facilitating intercultural dialogue by cross cultural project work, project meetings and results from participating countries.
- Facilitate partner institutions and the local, regional and wider community with the knowledge on existing methods in the other countries (gained in the preliminary research)
